

To whom it may concern;

It is a distinct privilege to be asked to write this letter of recommendation for DWA Construction Company.

In my 18 year career as an architect and senior project manager for VCBO Architecture, LLC, I have had the occasion to work very closely with every large, experienced school construction company in the state of Utah, and have been able to witness first-hand the service these firms provide to their clients. As such I find myself in a particularly advantageous position to observe first-hand the detailed work these firms do. In that light I am confident when I say that DWA Construction Company consistently occupies the top nine spots on my top ten list of General Contractors I recommend when I am asked by my clients who they should look to for quality construction services in their respective districts.

Over the past 10 years I have personally worked with DWA Construction Company on well over ten school projects, each with very different schedules, scopes, budgets, and locations; both urban and rural, but each one of critical importance to their owners.

I could point to their attention to detail, the intensity they bring to the project regardless of project size or distance, the capable staff they provide for each project, or the extraordinary job they do ensuring quality on their projects through their investment in a dedicated on site quality control manager that supplements the project manager, project superintendent, and project engineer. But ultimately those are merely byproducts of what makes DWA great...concern for their reputation. While many contractors talk about integrity DWA actually practices it. They infuse everything they do with it, and it shows in every project of mine that they have built.

I am proud of my long association with this great company, the projects they have built for me, and I respect the manner in which they do their business. I am thus proud to offer my enthusiastic endorsement of this great Utah Company as one of the premiere large Construction Management/General Construction firms for Utah schools.
